A RESOLUTION IN SUPPORT OF THE PRESERVATION OF TAX EXEMPT FINANCING

WHEREAS a fundamental principle of tax-exempt financing is the ability of local governments to determine the services needed in their respective communities and to raise capital free from federal tax on the bonds used to finance those services. The exclusion of interest on state and local obligations from federal gross income tax is a critical financing tool during this time when job creation and rebuilding critical infrastructure is essential for our nation's state and local economies.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that (insert City or Village name here) opposes efforts by Congress and the Administration to eliminate or limit the use of tax-exempt bonds by State or Local governments or efforts to limit or change the ability of investors to claim this tax exemption.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution shall be sent to our Congressional Representatives and the Administration.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution shall be submitted to the New York Conference of Mayors with a request that it be submitted to the membership for debate and action.
Public Power and Tax-Exempt Financing

Municipal bond interest is, and has always been, exempt from federal tax. Preposals to replace or repeal this federal tax exemption—none of which propose allowing state and local governments to tax federal bond interest—are misguided, will make critical infrastructure investments more costly, and in the case of public power utility customers, will force a regressive tax increase in the form of higher rates.

- Tax-exempt financing (TEF) reduces capital costs for public power utilities.
  - TEF reduces the amount of interest paid on municipal bonds:
    - Historically by 150 to 200 basis points; and
    - More recently by 50 basis points.
  - Cost-savings are either passed on to customers through reduced rates or allow further investments in power generation, distribution, security, and efficiency.
    - Safe, affordable, and reliable power keep communities, and the nation, economically competitive.

- Municipal bonds are stable financing tools that free state and local governments from dependence on the annual federal appropriations and budget process.
  - The federal government is facing huge deficits and cutting its budget: tax-exempt financing gives state and local governments the power to meet their responsibilities.
  - Other types of municipal securities are vulnerable to the federal budget process.
    - In 2013, federal payments to issuers of Build America Bonds (a taxable direct payment bond) will be cut 7.6%, as part of the Budget Control Act of 2010.

- TEF is not a gift from the federal government.
  - Just as interest on $3 trillion in municipal bonds is exempt from federal tax, so $11 trillion in federal bond, bill, and note interest is exempt from state and local taxation.
    - This system of reciprocal immunity is more than a century old.
  - TEF matters at the margin, reducing borrowing costs, but the issuer is still fully responsible for paying principle and interest on those loans.

- The municipal bond market gives small municipalities access to investors they could never reach in the taxable bond market.
  - There are roughly 13,000 municipal bond issuances annually (median size: $7 million).
  - By comparison, there are 2,500 corporate bond issues (median size: $210 million).

- Tax-exempt financing is a sound, time-tested financing tool.
  - The 2008 global recession was driven, in large part, by investments in exotic and largely unregulated financial instruments.
  - In contrast, from 1970 through 2011, only 71 rated municipal bonds defaulted.
    - That is a default rate approaching just 0.01%.

- Tax-exempt financing provides a natural project viability test.
- Tax-exempt financing does not encourage profligacy: If a project is not viable, investors will not invest.
December XX, 2012

The Honorable Charles E. Schumer; Kirsten Gillibrand; your Congressperson
The United States Senate/House of Representatives
Senate/House Office Building
Washington, D.C. XXX

Dear Senator/Congressman XXXX:

I am writing on behalf of [insert utility’s name], regarding the Congressional consideration of the impending "fiscal cliff" and efforts that will reportedly lay the groundwork for broader tax reform. As you work to address these issues, I urge you to consider what effect these decisions will have on state and local governments like ours. I am particularly concerned about proposals to alter the tax treatment of municipal bonds, including proposals to cap the exclusion for the interest on these bonds.

Although the proposals to cap tax deductions as a means to raise revenue may appear innocuous, such a cap could have a significantly negative effect on our municipal utilities. Like all state and local governments, [insert utility’s name], relies on tax-exempt bonds to finance infrastructure improvements. At the levels being discussed, a cap on deductions—if it were to include the current exclusion for interest on municipal bonds—would effectively impose a federal tax on most if not all state and local bond interest paid to individuals. The same is true of the other alternatives being discussed.

[insert utility’s name] cannot look to shareholders to raise capital, and we are not eligible for the tax incentives that are currently available to private entities. As a result, such a tax would severely reduce our ability to finance utility infrastructure improvements and investments. Under the Budget Control Act of 2011, discretionary aid to state and local governments is already slated to fall to its lowest level in more than four decades; further still if sequestration is allowed to take effect. Taxing state and local infrastructure investments through a cap or other change to the tax treatment of municipal bonds will make it harder still to build the infrastructure necessary for economic growth and will kill the jobs that would result from those projects.

The goal of federal deficit reduction is critical. However, I urge you to reject any proposal that would balance the federal budget on the backs of state and local governments and—by extension—our ratepayers and citizens. A federal tax on municipal debt, however imposed, will impact our fiscal health and our ability to improve or expand our community's infrastructure to compete in the 21st century.

Sincerely,

Sample op-ed in support of the preservation of tax-exempt financing

In response to the impending “fiscal cliff” crisis, some in Congress have suggested eliminating the tax-exempt status of municipal bonds. [Insert name of utility] issues bonds to finance capital projects like power plants and transmission lines [optional- insert example of project funded by bond issuance]. These projects make sure that the lights turn on when you flip the switch. But some in Washington call tax exemption a subsidy from the federal government, even though municipal bond interest is--and always has been--exempt from federal tax, just as federal bonds are exempt from state and local taxes. They want to repeal, or limit, this tax exemption to help balance the federal budget. If that happens, we will have to pay higher interest rates to compensate investors for the taxes they would have to pay. This would have immediate and negative impacts on [insert name of utility] and our community, because tax-exempt financing is the only tool we have to fund capital improvements; we cannot look to shareholders to raise capital, and we are not eligible for tax incentives available to private entities. When faced with higher borrowing costs, [insert name of utility] has two options – to raise electric rates on our customers or forgo system improvements that could imperil reliability – neither of which is acceptable.

The economic turbulence of the last few years has been especially hard on local governments. Taxing municipal bonds to bail out Washington will make the recovery all the more difficult. Simply put, retaining the federal tax exemption for interest on municipal debt is critical to the fiscal health of [insert utility name] and our ability to bring reliable and cost-effective electricity to our community.
